

Sharon Dunwoody
Class of 1965

Sharon Dunwoody, Marion High School Class of 1965, is a professor emerita at the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and award-winning researcher in the field of science communication.

Dunwoody earned her bachelor's degree in journalism from Indiana University in 1969 and, after a stint as a science writer in Texas and Pennsylvania, returned to school to earn a master's in mass communication from Temple University in 1975 and her Ph.D. in the same field from IU in 1978. Since then, she has become a lauded researcher and teacher, energizing a new field of research, science communication, while looking at the role of science, environment and health messages in mass media and the impact on public understanding of science. In addition to authoring or coauthoring more than 50 journal articles and more than 30 book chapters, she has written, co-written or co-edited five books.

She taught science journalism and communication for more than 30 years at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and also served as director of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication and as an associate dean in the UW-Madison Graduate School. She previously was on the faculty of the Ohio State University School of Journalism.

She has been a Fulbright Distinguished Lecturer in Brazil, a visiting fellow at Deakin University in Australia, and Donnier Guest Professor at Stockholm University. She was named a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Society for Risk Analysis, and the Midwest Association for Public Opinion Research. She also has served as president of the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication and of the Midwest Association for Public Opinion Research.

Dunwoody was the first woman to earn the Paul J. Deutschmann Award for Excellence in Research from the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication. She also was honored with the University of Wisconsin's Hilldale Award, which recognizes distinguished contributions to teaching, research and service. She has also been selected to receive the Wayne Danielson Award for Distinguished Contributions to Communication Research in October 2016 from the University of Texas at Austin.

Joe Sutter
Class of 1969

Joe Sutter, Marion High School Class of 1969, helped lead the Giants to the basketball state finals that year and then played professionally in Europe. On that foundation he went on to build an outstanding physical therapy practice in Virginia, and then to share his expertise as a clinical educator.

Though the Giants fell just short of the state title that year, Sutter earned the Trester Award, given to one senior each year who excels in mental attitude, scholarship, and leadership, along with athletic ability. In 1994, he was named to the Indiana High School Basketball Hall of Fame's Silver Anniversary Team. He has also been named to the Grant County All-Century Basketball Team.

In addition to basketball, Sutter excelled at tennis, and twice earned the state singles championship title in individual competition. He lost only two regular season matches in the course of his final two years at Marion High School at No. 1 singles.

He received a basketball scholarship to attend Davidson College, and was twice named MVP and All-Southern Conference. He later went pro, playing in Europe. He eventually returned to his home state to complete his bachelor's degree at Indiana University, and he earned his master's in physical therapy from Duke University in Durham, N.C.

He began his physical therapy practice in Richmond, Va., in 1981. The company he founded, Tuckahoe Physical Therapy, grew to be the largest private provider of outpatient physical therapy services in the metro Richmond and central Virginia area for two decades, at its peak treating more than 300 patients a day at 12 clinics.

He has long been a participant in the federal early intervention program, which helps children ages 0 to 3 and their families overcome physical and developmental challenges, often correcting issues that can become much larger problems later in life. He has also maintained strong ties to the world of sports, providing physical therapy to a wide range of athletes, from local high schools to professional teams.

In addition, he has been involved in civic associations and other philanthropic endeavors that have had a positive impact on his community in Richmond, Va., including coaching youth sports and helping to found the Richmond Sports Backers, which has awarded nearly $1 million in college scholarships to high school athletes.

Avis Martin Stewart
Class of 1970

Avis Martin Stewart, Marion High School Class of 1970, is a longtime teacher, coach, and administrator, first at Marion Community Schools, then at Richmond High School, then at Earlham College, where he has helped promote goodwill and cooperation between the college and the community, and has played key roles in Earlham capital projects and nonprofit undertakings in the Richmond community. He has distinguished himself both as a servant of public good and as a healer of divisions in his community.

At Marion High School, he excelled in academics and athletics. He went on to earn his bachelor's degree in education from Earlham College in 1974, and his master's from Ball State University.

After one year teaching at Marion Community Schools and five years at Richmond High School, he began his tenure at Earlham in 1980 as an English instructor and basketball coach. Since then he has held various administrative roles, and in 2002 was appointed Vice President for Community Relations. In that role he has worked tirelessly to build bridges of cooperation and collaboration between Earlham College and the Richmond community. In 2015 he assumed the duties of Vice President of Institutional Advancement, while still continuing his role as VP of Community Relations.

At Earlham, Stewart has also counseled, mentored, and befriended students, faculty, and staff. He has served on boards and in other roles for a wide variety of community organizations, including the Richmond Symphony Orchestra, the Boys and Girls Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Parks Department, the United Way, the Wayne County Foundation, the City of Richmond Visioning Committee, the Mayor's Economic Vitality Committee, and more. He is an invaluable resource as he is able to rally others around the philanthropic efforts of the community. He has been a model and inspiration in the lives of past, current, and future leaders, including youths who will serve Earlham and the Richmond community for years to come.

He has earned various awards, including the Sagamore of the Wabash, given by the governor of Indiana. He was inducted into the Earlham Athletic Hall of Fame as an individual and as a member of the 1970-71 men's basketball team. The Avis Stewart Clubhouse was named in his honor in the Randal R. Sadler Stadium at Earlham College.

James D. Luttrull Jr.
Class of 1974

James D. Luttrull Jr., Marion High School Class of 1974, longtime Grant County prosecutor and criminal justice professor at Indiana Wesleyan University, is involved in a wide variety of community and volunteer activities and organizations, and has been a leader in addressing child abuse locally and nationally.

He was born in Marshall County, Indiana, and his parents, James and June Luttrull, brought their five children to Marion in 1964. Luttrull's first job in law enforcement was in 1965 as a fourth grade crossing guard at Horace Mann School.

He earned his bachelor's degree from Indiana Wesleyan University in 1978 and his doctorate from the Indiana University School of Law in 1981.

After working in the Marion County (Indianapolis) Prosecutor's Office for two years, Luttrull returned in 1983 to his hometown, where he served as a Deputy Prosecutor and Chief Deputy Prosecutor for 20 years. He was then elected Prosecuting Attorney for the 48th Judicial Circuit (Grant County), an office he has held continuously since January 2003. He also taught criminal justice courses part-time at Indiana Wesleyan University for 32 years.

He is a locally and nationally recognized expert and has lectured for the Indiana Prosecuting Attorney Council (IPAC) and Finding Words-Indiana, as well as the National District Attorneys Association's National Center for the Prosecution of Child Abuse and National Center for the Prosecution of Violence Against Women, training prosecutors, law enforcement and child protection workers.

He was honored by the Indiana Coalition Against Domestic Violence for Outstanding Service to Victims and received Indiana Wesleyan University's Outstanding Alumni Achievement Award.

Luttrull is a past president of the Association of Indiana Prosecuting Attorneys Inc., vice president of the Indiana Child Advocacy Centers Coalition, and a member of IPAC's Ethics committee. He serves on the boards of GRACE (a national organization dedicated to educating and training churches to recognize and respond to the sin of child abuse), and First Light Child Advocacy Center of Grant County. He has volunteered locally for Kids Hope USA, Project Leadership, St. Martin de Porres, PAL Club and Marion Lightning Soccer Club. He is a member of College Wesleyan Church.

Jim and Debbie, his wife and favorite stained glass artist, have three sons, three daughters-in-law, and three above-average grandchildren who make their homes in Marion, Indianapolis, and Akron, Ohio.

David Kiley, M.D.
Class of 1978

David Kiley, M.D., Marion High School Class of 1978, is an OB/GYN who has earned recognition and respect as an expert in the field and a leader in patient-centered care. In 2004, he was part of a team of doctors who beat 20,000-to-1 odds to save the life of a pregnant woman suffering from a catastrophic heart disorder, and the life of her child as well.

Kiley earned his bachelor's degree in business and pre-med from Arizona State University in 1982. He graduated with his doctorate from the Indiana University School of Medicine in 1986, and did his residency in obstetrics and gynecology at St. Vincent Hospital and Healthcare Center. He earned a master's of business administration from the University of Indianapolis in 2014.

He ran a private practice as an OB/GYN from 1990 to 2014, during which time he served countless women and their children, but gained national recognition in early 2004, when he helped to save the life of a 27-year-old mother with a grave heart condition and her infant daughter just months after the same condition — an aortic dissection — entered the public consciousness when it killed actor John Ritter.

In 2015, Kiley was named Senior Vice President and physician executive for Community Health Networks' North Region, having previously served in various leadership roles for Community since 1992, including Vice President of Medical Affairs and Clinical Performance for the North Region, and specialty care physician executive.

He was also presented in 2015 with the Friend of Nursing Award by Community Health Network. He was previously named as a top Indianapolis physician in Indianapolis Monthly magazine, and has appeared on the Healthgrades Honor Roll. He is a fellow of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and he has served on numerous medical review panels.

He is a sponsor of the Malcolm L. Wrege Society, a physician-organized philanthropic foundation, and he also has supported the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, the National Down Syndrome Society, and the American Heart Association.

Diane Janowicz, M.D.

Diane Janowicz, M.D., Marion High School Class of 1992, an infectious diseases and HIV/AIDS specialist at IU Health and faculty member and fellowship program director at the Indiana University School of Medicine, spearheaded the clinical response to the major HIV outbreak in the rural community of Austin in southern Indiana in 2015.

After graduating with an honors diploma from MHS, she earned two bachelor's degrees with honors in biology and English literature from Loyola University, Chicago, in 1996. She earned her medical doctorate from Indiana University in 2000. She completed her residency in internal medicine at IU School of Medicine in 2003, then her fellowship in infectious diseases also at IU in 2006.

She has been on the staff of the IU School of Medicine since then, first as a lecturer, then an assistant professor, and since 2012 has served as clinical educator and program director for the Division of Infectious Diseases. She is also a practicing physician with the IU Health Network, and the clinical director for the Midwest AIDS Training and Education Center in Indiana.

In 2015, Janowicz spearheaded the clinical response to the major HIV outbreak in the rural southern Indiana town of Austin. She was among a team of physicians and health officials working together with the Indiana Department of Health and the federal Centers for Disease Control, along with local officials, to coordinate a comprehensive approach to contain the epidemic through carefully collaborated medical care and social services.

She earned a letter of commendation from Gov. Mike Pence for her role in addressing this public health crisis. Previous honors and awards include the Arthur C. White Fellowship Award in Infectious Diseases, the Trustees Teaching Award from IU School of Medicine, and the Inspirational Physician award from the American Medical Association's Women Physicians Section.

Janowicz is a member of the American Society of Microbiology and the Infectious Diseases Society of America. She has also served as a guest speaker and volunteer for Teach for America, and as a mentor for Big Brothers, Big Sisters of Indianapolis. She also volunteers for the Indiana Canine Association Network.

Zach Randolph
Class of 2000

Zach Randolph, Marion High School Class of 2000, is a three-time NBA All-Star and a committed philanthropist, regularly reaching out to help kids and families in his home city of Marion and his adopted home of Memphis, where he has played for the NBA's Grizzlies since 2009.

Randolph came from humble beginnings in Marion, spending much of his time outside of school at the PAL Club and Boys and Girls Club, where he discovered his love for basketball. But even at a young age, his giving spirit was part of what drove him to work hard and strive for success.

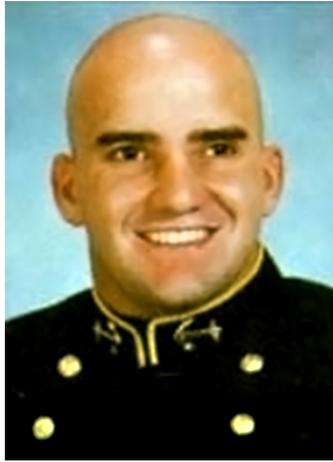

That work ethic was a huge part of what led him to success on the basketball court, and in his senior year at Marion High School he led the Giants to their seventh state title — and the first since the three-peat in the 1980s — and was named a McDonald's All-American.

His talents led him to Michigan State University, where he helped lead the team to the Final Four in his freshman year. He was drafted into the NBA in 2001, and has gone on to an outstanding career that has included three turns as an NBA All-Star and multiple appearances in the NBA playoffs. He has played for the Portland Trail Blazers, New York Knicks, Los Angeles Clippers, and now the Memphis Grizzlies.

Throughout his long career and many professional achievements, though, "Z-Bo" (as he has been known since his Marion days) has never forgotten what it was like to be in need, and he takes every opportunity he can to play a direct role in helping meet others' needs.

He continues to support the Marion Boys and Girls Club, and also provides food to families around the holidays in Marion. He has also earned recognition for his contributions to the community of Memphis, where he has played for the Memphis Grizzlies since 2009, and where he is affectionately known as "Z-Bo Clause" during the holiday season, when he is known for providing direct, personal assistance to hundreds of families each year. He steps in often for those in need, whether it's a family struggling to pay their bills, or a dog stuck in a pipe and in desperate need of veterinary care, or a child with little hope of a happy Christmas, or a family facing a stark table during the Thanksgiving holiday.

Randolph is a true Giant and arguably the most successful professional athlete ever to wear a Giants uniform. He is truly a testament to the power of hard work and generosity, and an inspiration to those who dream of overcoming difficult circumstances.

Capt. Brandon A. 'Bull' Barrett
Class of 2001

Capt. Brandon A. "Bull" Barrett, Marion High School Class of 2001, was killed in action in Afghanistan while serving with the U.S. Marine Corps. Barrett was an outstanding athlete, avid outdoorsman, a loyal and dedicated friend, and a natural leader, whose passionate commitment to the Marine Corps and to his troops was insurmountable.

While at Marion High School, he was a three sport athlete every year, and he maintained a grade-point average of 3.5.

Barrett graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., in 2006. He served with the 1st Battalion, 6th Marine Regiment, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force from Camp Lejune, N.C. He deployed to Afghanistan in support of Operation Enduring Freedom from March to October 2008, and again in December 2009.

He received many awards during his military career, including the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the Global War on Terrorism Service Medal, the Afghanistan Campaign Medal, and the NATO International Security Assistance Force Medal.

Barrett passed away at the age of 27, on Wednesday, May 5, 2010, in the Helmand province of Afghanistan, serving his country as an Infantry Officer in the U.S. Marine Corps. Five months into his second deployment, he was shot by Taliban insurgents while conducting his duty. He was posthumously promoted from first lieutenant to the rank of captain.

He was laid to rest on May 15, 2010, in Gardens of Memory, just north of Marion. That day is now recognized every year in Marion as Capt. Brandon A. Barrett Day.

In Barrett's honor, and according to his wishes, family and friends created a scholarship fund in his name through the Community Foundation of Grant County. Since 2011, scholarships have been given in his name to support Marion High School graduates as they continue their education. In addition, in 2014 the Brandon Barrett Hero Fund was created through the Community Foundation, dedicated to giving back to the Marion High School athletic department. Barrett's service and heart continue to inspire all who knew him in life, or hear of his legacy.

Kerry Clevenger
Honorary Inductee

Though Kerry Clevenger spent his early days as a Swayzee Speedking, he has spent decades as one of the most ardent and generous supporters of the Marion Giants.

His ties to the Giants have their roots in his Speedking days, when he played basketball for Hall of Fame coach Jack Colescott, who later would coach the Giants to much acclaim. Clevenger's love of sports still guides his philanthropy today.

Clevenger graduated high school in 1961, then continued his education with IBM in Minnesota. He later returned to Marion, where he joined the ranks of local business owners, turning the Plymouth Club and Crest Lanes into veritable community landmarks.

He also has impacted thousands of young local athletes directly as a coach and indirectly as a sponsor and supporter. He began coaching in 1969, leading his AAU basketball to the state title. Since then he has been a powerful presence on the playing field for many sports, including Lincoln Field and PAL Club Little League, along with YMCA and Boys and Girls Club basketball. Coach Clevenger sets high standards for his players and expects the best from them both on and off the court. He also sponsored the Plymouth Club Bombers basketball and softball teams for decades, and he has financially supported countless other youth leagues.

Clevenger served on the board of directors for the Marion PAL Club, Marion Giants Boosters, Marion Urban League, the Grant County YMCA, and the Boys and Girls Club of Grant County. His generosity with his time and financial support have earned him many community and state awards, including the Sertoma Service to Mankind award, Mr. PAL Club award, the NAACP Community Service Award, and the Sagamore of the Wabash, awarded by Gov. Frank O'Bannon. He is also an inductee in the Indiana Softball Hall of Fame, the Grant County Sports Hall of Fame, and the Marion Bowling Hall of Fame.
